1. China ratified the ILO Occupational Safety and Health Convention (No.155)

1.1 On 31 October, 2006, the Standing Committee of Chinese National People's Congress ratified the ILO Occupational Safety and Health Convention (NO.155). This marked the Chinese Government's commitment to the world community that China will, just like other ILO member countries, improve labor conditions and work environment, consistently raise worker's occupational safety and health level and accept worldwide supervision.

1.2 Modern occupational safety magazine made a special report for ratification of NO.155 in China, covering interviews of Ministry of Labor and Social Security, State Safety Work Administration, All-China Federation of Trade Union, China Enterprise Confederation, and ILO Beijing Office.

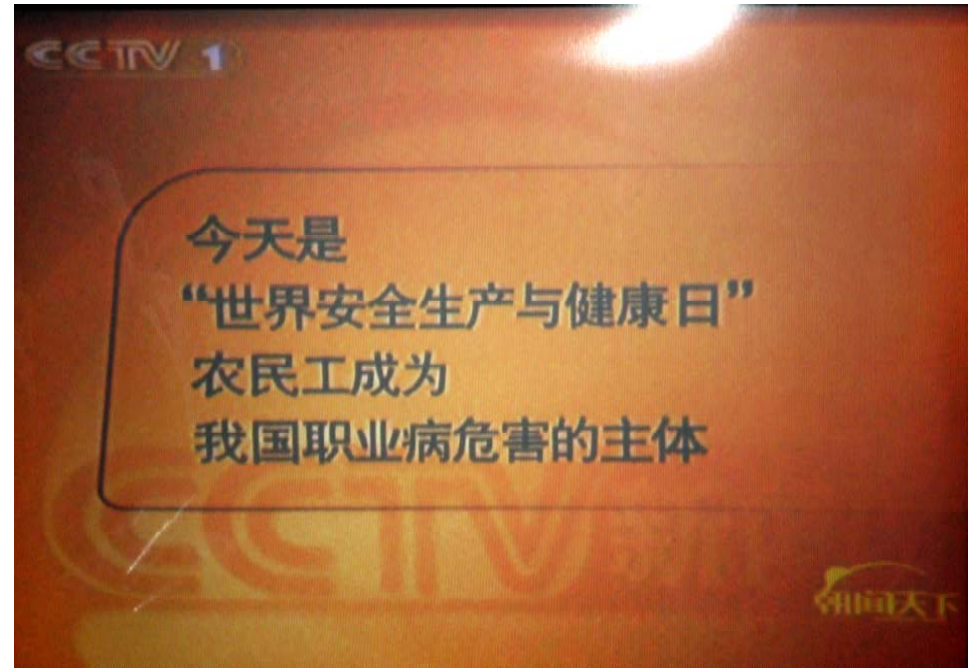

2. China celebrated “2007 World Day on Safety and Health at Work”

2.1 China Central Television (CCTV) reported the news of World Day for Safety and Health at Work.

2.2 China's State Administration of Work Safety (SAWS) combining with ILO, held a keynote report session on 27 April, 2007, in Beijing. Its theme was Safety and Health Workplace Making Decent Work a Reality— Concerning Employees' Safety and Occupational Health in Mining in China.

2.3 China Work Safety Newspaper, which is in charge of SAWS, compiled a Special Issue for World Day. It covered the origin of World Day for Safety and Health at Work, themes and some news in past years.

2.4 National ILO/CIS Centre for China translated English version of Report on World Day for Safety and Health at Work into Chinese version, and distributed it to the representatives attending the meeting of a keynote report, and the relevant organizations.

3. China conducted a Work Safety Month in June 2007

3.1 During the work safety month, SAWS organized the publicity and consultancy activities in Beijing on 10 June 2007. The activities focused on publicizing work safety theory with safe development as its center, in order to enhance the understanding of the Work Safety Law. The activities received active participation and response from the general public and have achieved expected results.
